III. Project Details

Project Description

Public service goes beyond a deep passion to aid the poor and marginalized, improve government systems, or make a significant impact on the lives of citizens. While personal commitment to change is vital, public service is fundamentally a craft and a virtue—a profession that demands prudence, knowledge, skills, and abilities to advance the common good and foster meaningful progress for the nation. To meet these demands, the Ilocos Training and Regional Medical Center (ITRMC) partnered with the Development Academy of the Philippines (DAP) through the Graduate School of Public and Development Management (GSPDM). This collaboration aims to enhance the competencies of public health personnel through the Certificate Course on Strategic Health Communication Governance (CC SHCG).

PROJECT ACCOMPLISHMENT REPORT

The CC SHCG course equips public health managers with strategic communication skills, focusing on empathy-based communication, marketing, and behavioral economics—principles often used in the business sector. It introduces tools for creating strategic content and utilizing digital communication platforms, ensuring that health programs are effectively communicated to and embraced by target audiences.

Project Objective

At the end of the course, the students will be able to understand, explain, and apply the principles and practices of strategic communication as a vital component of health governance and effective service delivery.
